“Dad, the last few weeks of your life we began to pray that God would come and take you, so the man we knew as our father could be free from the cancer that was making you so weak and sick. And on May 10, 2014 God did. It was at a time that just you and mom shared together as she watched the last breathe you took. We knew that it was best, but the emptiness that we have is so hard. I will never forget your sense of humor that you had and kept right until the end. You touched so many peoples lives and gave so much to us. We know that you are with peace and are free from cancer. Every time I see a hummingbird are squirrels running around I will know that that beauty in seeing that is being sent from you, and if a bird poops on my head I will know that, that's your sense of humor coming down to me. I love you and forever will hold dear to my heart.
